Educause Review Mobile Devices, Jim Davis and Rosemmmary A. Rocchio "Mobile use of the Internet is on target to surpass fixed use by 2014. Three-fourths of all college/university students have purchased or intend to purchase an Internet-enabled handheld device within the next year. The smartphone market is changing almost monthly."

Josh Keller, The Digital Campus, The Chronicle of HE, May 8, 2011 ABILENE CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY "In 2008, the Texas university was the first to give all new students their choice of an iPhone or an iPod Touch. William J. Rankin, an associate professor of English who helps lead the project, says 85 percent of faculty members report using the devices in the classroom at least once a week. Such efforts have to be about fundamentally rethinking the way we do teaching and learning," Mr. Rankin says. "If it's just about giving out a device, it's not going to last. It can't be a marketing initiative or a recruiting initiative.""

Duke gave iPods to all incoming students in 2004 but scaled back the program two years later. Tracy Futhey, chief information officer, says campus officials are now focusing on improving Duke's mobile application and making existing campus data available on new platforms.

The Greensburg, Pa., university has drawn widespread press coverage since it gave iPads and MacBook Pros to all full-time incoming students last fall. Students pay a $500 technology fee each semester. JoAnne W. Boyle, Seton Hill's president, calls the iPad a "magical device" that could be a "transformative learning tool on campus."

It's more convenient, and it gives the researchers better data, because a phone's GPS feature can send along exact location coordinates (and the app encourages users to take a picture with the phone's camera).

"Instead of clicking print when saving an article for later reading, many professors now send the document to their phone or tablet computer. Those I talked with cited a range of apps designed for the task, though Dropbox was cited most frequently. The commercial app is a available for iPhones, iPads, and for smartphones or tablets running Google's Android operating system. David Parry, an assistant professor of emergent media and communications at the University of Texas at Dallas, said he uses Dropbox for both scholarly reading and keeping track of documents for the courses he teaches." A cellphone screen may seem too small to use as a study aid. But then again, those screens are about the same size as standard 3 by 5 index cards, an age-old format for flashcards. ### 1. For intervention.

"I found an app called Math Drills, to help students with their math facts. After a school-wide math fact program, there were a certain number of students that still didn't know their addition facts. Essentially, they had trouble with 'at a snap' recall of facts," she explained.

1. For intervention.

"I put those few students on the iPad app, which gave them the opportunity to practice and then to test themselves. It kept track of their scores and showed their improvement. I've had students BEG me to allow them to practice their facts—under normal circumstances, what fifth-grader do you know [who] WANTS to practice their facts? I'll take it! Each student has showed improvement in the quick recall of facts, and they want to. It can't get much better than that."

2. For Enrichment.

"There are several apps out there for the 'smart kids.' I found one for the iPhone, which I use on the iPad, called Miss Spell's Class," she said. "It gives students a series of challenging vocabulary words, and they need to decide if it's spelled correctly or incorrectly. I've seen my gifted kids get so frustrated (it shows them that they're not always No. 1), and consequently, so proud of themselves because they've finally conquered it. The success is made much sweeter when you have to work for it."

3. For assistive technology.

One reader, Eva, said she uses the iPad to help a boy in her om who has autism. Supposedly, the iPad was the only tool that could engage him for any length of time with his speech therapist.

"Upon first seeing it, he stared at it for a few seconds then reached for it," she explained. "We gave him the iPad and he immediately started mimicking us by pushing all the right buttons to see the interactive app. We love it so much that his mother, with the help of a therapist, wrote a mini-grant to one of the local organizations so that he could have one of his own.

4. For digital literacy.

Every one of the 270 students at the Master's Academy in iedo, Fla., will receive a school-issued iPad next school year...The Christian school is paying for the iPads, year... The Christian School is paying for the irrads, because school officials hope to teach students to "engage the digital world productively," said Mitchell Salerno, the high school's principal, in an interview with the Orlando Sentinel. School officials hope to give students the skills expected of them both in college and in the workplace.

The iPads will not replace all textbooks, but they will allow students to do much of their school work online, reduce reliance on paper, and give teenagers access to resources not available in class.

5. For organizing resources-and for reading.

"The way I create folders on my classroom iPad is by organizing them with a student focus in mind. For example, I created folders labeled 'Free Write' and 'Free Math' so students know what they are allowed to use when they are finished with their writing or math assignment," he explains. "I also create specific folders for lessons or units of study. The folder labeled 'Earth' on our classroom iPad was created for small.
