At Grinnell College, students working with Tim Arner, an associate professor of English, have been virtually constructing Heorot, the medieval mead hall featured in Beowulf. Arner says that taking a virtual walk inside the hall will give students a clearer sense of space, culture and power structures than reading the text alone. "The actual hall might be smaller than what our imagination wants it to be if we're basing it on images from Game of Thrones or a visit to Westminster Abbey," he says. "It's not that kind of place at all." (Grinnell College Immersive Experiences Lab)
